Good morning,

Does this happen to you (firstname) ?

Sometimes when I'm driving or on a train I see something that I think would make a great picture and there is nowhere to pull in or the train is speeding towards its destination. Frustrating isn't it?

For this week's picture I wanted to capture bare trees as this is the time of year when you can really appreciate their structure. This tree illustrates perfectly what I was looking for, apparently what you see about ground is mirrored by the roots below. I hope you like it.

Kat Swansey is an American documentary photographer capturing the abandoned structures, ghost towns, and rural communities that line the backroads of Texas. Her images are a reminder of what's left behind after the communities that lived there moved on.

Please take a moment to look, the link is below and do leave a comment. There are many more images of her Instagram feed.

Until next Monday have a great week.

Very best wishes,
