Good morning {firstname},

Last Monday morning when I looked at the frost and the rising sun I knew it was time to dash across to the golf course and take a few shots. If you click on the image to view a larger version you will see the Magpie in the bottom left more clearly. I love the shafts of sunlight across the fairway that reach right into trees. For those of you that play this is a par 5, 511 yard hole. Although it was only just after 8:00 am there were already a couple of golfers out braving the cold. I hope you like it because it was very cold.

Just a brief reminder to check out all the resources in The Journal particularly the articles by Genesis Imaging on caring for your framed artwork and the different types of frames available. Until next Monday have a great week.
