Good morning {firstname},

The arrival of November brings with it misty cold mornings and the possibility of atmospheric images as shafts of sunlight cut through the fog. I was looking for something interesting to photograph when I noticed the man apparently lost in thought as he looks toward the open gate in the distance, the dog who had heard me approaching turned toward the camera as the sun began to add some colour to the scene.

As I have written previously photography is often about being in the right place at the right time and this is another example, ten minutes later and the fog was starting to disappear, the man and his dog were long gone.

In The Journal this week a second blog from Genesis Imaging, in this post they cover Caring for your finished work. It provides useful tips of how to look after your framed photographs.

Until next Monday have a great week.
